

welcome

Since 1994, 401 Richmond Street West has been providing affordable workspace to artists and the creative community in downtown Toronto. This restored turn-of-the-century industrial building has become a hub of cultural production with close to 150 tenants contributing in various ways to the culture, commerce, and creativity of our city.

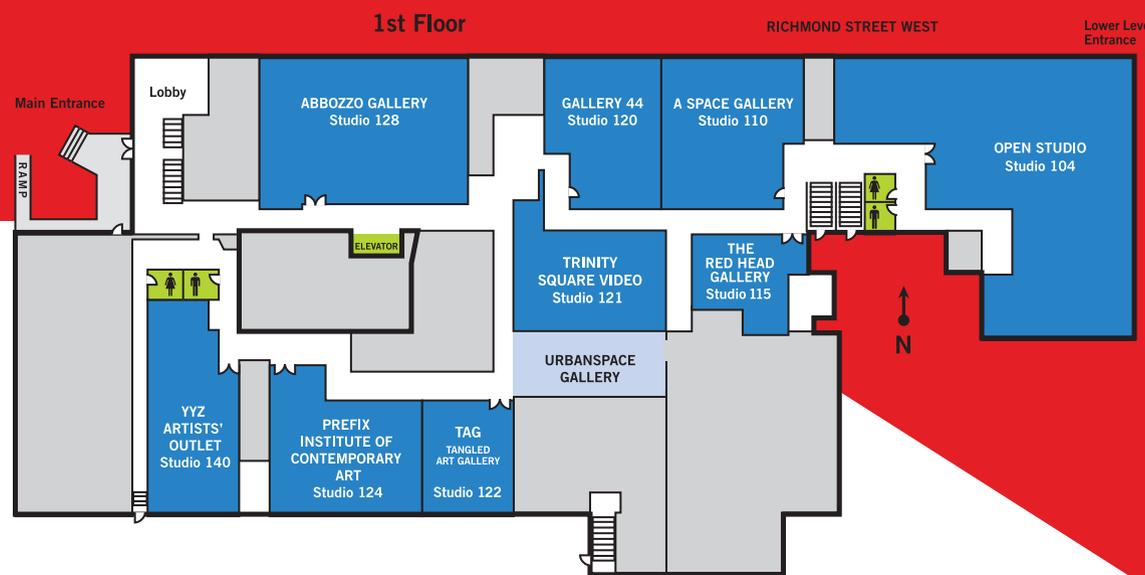

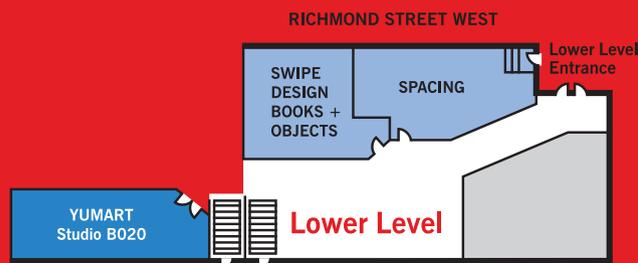

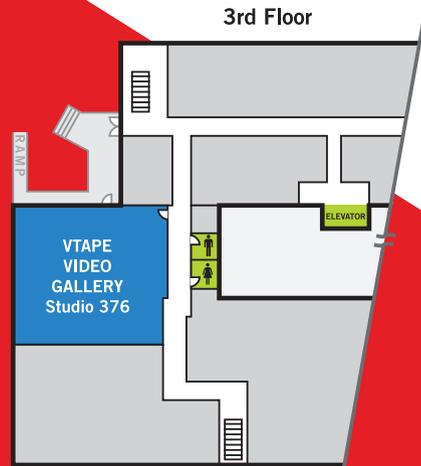

The collection of galleries and artist-run centres located at 401 provide vital exhibition space, facilities, and member services to countless local, national, and international artists. This cluster of galleries represents a diverse spectrum of voices, mediums, as well as approaches to artistic practice that is reflective of the broader community in Toronto and an important contributor to our cultural economy.

We invite you to spend time exploring each of the unique galleries and shops located at 401 Richmond. Please refer to this guide, as well as the exhibition listings page in our Update newsletter as you tour the building.

401 Richmond Street West is owned and operated by Urbanspace Property Group. As a mission-driven developer, Urbanspace's initiatives are directed toward the preservation and restoration of historic and architecturally significant spaces with the goal of adaptively reusing these buildings to provide commercial opportunities for the creative sector. 401 Richmond provides dynamic spaces for the arts and social innovation communities.

The Brickolage Tour Program provides opportunities throughout the year for groups to visit the galleries and artist-run centres that bring visual arts programming to the building. Arrangements can be made to meet the curators, artists, and staff who run these presentation venues, as well as behind-the-scenes access to art-making facilities. Please contact info@urbanspace.org if you would like to arrange a visit.
